- The current RFP has officially been approved and accepted by the Reparations Task Force
 - Dorothea Jones: request for task force members to receive a hard copy of the RFP prior to the official release on Monday
 - Carrie Mays: are task force members allowed to be a part of the outreach and distribution process?
 - Answer: Yes, TF members should be participating in outreach, but should direct specific questions about proposals and applications to Ajay Singh
- Open for public comment/questions:
 - Antonia Edwards: what prompted the change from the original RFP which qualified American freedmen and women descendants to the Black American freedpeople, which puts the proposal under threat of being struck down due to it being a “race-based” qualifier
 - The decision was made because the Task Force chose to interpret the SCOTUS opinion as only relating to schools as well as to increase the specificity so only those Black Boston residents could be eligible and to prevent non-Black residents from attempting to qualify
 - Cheryce Cryer: former Boston resident and current reparations advocate; helped to form LA reparations commissions; encourages Task Force to remember that reparations is based on legal precedent, and to include the Commissioner of the Reparations Task Force in California. Also stated that policy change is not effective reparations, only direct cash payments to descendants of chattel slavery is.
 - Reggie Stewart: Is the Task Force responsible for selecting the researchers?
 - Answer: the selection committee will be composed of the four RFP subgroup members, and approximately five City representatives.
 - Followup question: what will happen if the Task Force and City of Boston are in opposition to this decision?
 - Answer: that is unlikely, but the team would work through a process to come to a consensus.
 - Nyhiem Way: president and co-founder of the United Sons and Daughters of Freedmen, work with several reparations organizations throughout the country as well as Kamilah Moore with the California Reparations Task Force; concerned about the language in the RFP conflicting with the SCOTUS ruling against affirmative action
 - Chairman Feaster: the City staff will investigate this topic and the Chairman notes the concern, it remains to be seen if researchers come to the same conclusion on the legality of the utilization of “Black” in the RFP

- Edward Shaw III: concerned if the Task Force will ensure that descendants of chattel slavery (Black historians, HBCUs, etc) will be able to be awarded the contracts if they choose to apply
 - Answer: the incorporation of persons that have been affected by slavery and discrimination has been included in the RFP
- Carrie Mays: motion to change the language in the RFP back to “American freedwomen and freedmen” from “Black freedpeople”
 - The legal counsel will review it, but the RFP has already been voted on and there was no second to the motion
- Chairman Feaster thanked the Task Force, City of Boston representatives, and the public for their work and participation. The meeting was adjourned at 7:15 PM.
